Enloe's school counselors believe

- All students have the right to be served by and participate in the school counseling program.
- All students have dignity and worth.
- Students' ethnicity, culture, race, gender, sexual orientation and special needs should be considered in the planning and implementation of the school counseling program.

In Enloe's school counseling program

- School counselors collaborate with the administration, teachers, parents and the community to advocate for every student.
- Classroom lessons and activities are based on the Wake County Guidance Curriculum, which includes personal, social, and career domains.
- Various assessments are used to develop and evaluate the effectiveness of the program.
